I WENT MOURNING WITHOUT THE SUN; I STOOD UP AND CRIED IN THE CONGREGATION.—JOB, 30-28.

Dismal yesterday's of the Wilson administration are being so clearly depicted by Charles Evans Hughes that the cheerful tomorrow of republican restoration to power is easily discernible.

William Chinnings Bryan declares that Candidate Hughes is too partisan to hold a place on the federal bench. Why, Bill, he aint on the bench! Didn't you read his letter of resignation? He is gunning for democrats, this being the open season, and every time his gun goes off President Wilson calls a cabinet meeting.

On a recent Sunday a crowd of English workmen gathered in the famous Trafalgar Square and demanded that Kaiser Wilhelm, Admiral von Tirpitz and other noted Germans be hung. They should apply to T. Woodrow Wilson, Washington, D. C., for instructions on how to proceed. He can tell them how he handled Villa under the same circumstances.

Reports from various sections of the country are to the effect that President Wilson's vacillation on every conceivable subject is the chief cause of his loss of support among democrats. No man would have the confidence in a business associate who changed as often as does President Wilson and not many think a president should be less dependable than an ordinary business man.

Democrats promised in their 1912 campaign to reduce the cost of living by reducing the tariff. Today, notwithstanding the fact that imports are the greatest in our history, the cost of living is soaring. They steer clear of that subject in the platform of 1916. They promised economy, and their appropriations, even in times of peace, exceeded all records in our history by millions upon millions of dollars. This is a matter of record. In the early part of 1915, with the European war raging and Mexico on the rampage, they were against preparedness. They have changed their minds on that, and several times they have changed their minds on the degree of preparedness which should be provided. They are now making appropriations for preparedness with a reckless and criminal disregard of the wherewithal to foot the bills. With the price of everything going up they have evidently decided that the quicker they drain the public purse by way of taxation, the more they can buy with the money, and these appropriations will provide contracts for liberal subscribers to the democratic campaign fund. Isn't it about time to stop this sort of thing and get on a sane basis? The republican party can put us there.

Not long ago a traveling salesman on alighting from a regular passenger train at Mankato, Minn., shortly before 1 o'clock of the afternoon, handed his sample case and grip to a porter of a local hotel who was at the station to carry the hand baggage of prospective guests from the depot to the hotel. The porter took the articles to the hotel and dropped them on the floor of the hotel lobby. The salesman did not check his baggage, expecting to finish his business in time to take an afternoon train to another place. He did not finish business in time, however, and going to the hotel he opened his sample case, wrote orders and handed them to the clerk to mail, used the long distance telephone and sat about the hotel chairs, all without charge. He took his evening meal elsewhere, and for the first time registered about 10 o'clock of the evening and asked for a room. At that time his grip could not be found. In action to recover damages for its loss, the trial court held that the relation of innkeeper and guest existed from the time the salesman handed his baggage to the porter, but the supreme court of Minnesota reversed this ruling on the ground that the salesman did not manifest any intention of becoming a guest at the hotel until after his grip was lost. A new trial was therefore granted to the hotel-keeper.

CHARLES EVANS HUGHES IS GETTING TO THE THINKING PEOPLE.

"Tinker, tailor, soldier, sailor." So ran the old nursery rhyme. And so Charles Evans Hughes is running through the country. It apparently makes no difference whether his audience is made up of highly specialized mechanics, such as he found at the great automobile factories of Detroit, Mich.; whether it is a huge crowd collected from the cosmopolitan population of Chicago, as his hearers were at the Coliseum; whether they are the farmers whom he met in the great agricultural states of the Northwest; whether they are women endowed with the franchise and seeking to grant the same privilege to their sisters; or whether they are professional men or political managers or any other of the groups whom he has met since he began his speech-making tour. He gets them all.

Judge Hughes is showing a varied and highly sympathetic personality as he goes about the country. He is forceful without being didactic. He is sincere without being fanatical. He is thoughtful without being dull. He has a real message for every class of people and he never speaks as to a class. He is addressing himself to the great American people, of whatever condition or calling they may be, and his words reinforced by his manner, are reaching the intelligence of the electorate. The people are reacting to Hughes as they have reacted to no public speaker in recent years.

Charles Evans Hughes is getting to the people. And in consequence the people are growing more eager for the day to come when they can get at President Wilson.

President Wilson is still shouting for "forward looking men" to stand by his side. Men who look backward, especially those who look backward over the administration's record, are most distasteful to him.

BRYAN NEVER IS ASHAMED OF ANYTHING IT WOULD SEEM.

Bryan declares that he is not ashamed of the "deserving democrats" letter. It was written, he explains, to a man who held a position outside the civil service and the jobs he was trying to get for the faithful were likewise unprotected by civil service regulations.

Bryan misses the point. These places that he was trying to bag for the "deserving democrats" were not places which were to be treated like ordinary political spoils. They were offices which the United States had taken over, for temporary administration and for the benefit of the people of Santo Domingo—who were to pay the salaries. They were, in effect, positions of trusteeship; and they should have been filled by the most capable and energetic and altruistic men who could be found to accept them.

To treat them as partisan swag was to stultify the entire intent of our undertaking in Santo Domingo, to cast a shadow of distrust over all our relations with the peoples in Central and South America, and to endanger the success of other and later negotiations which were bound to arise in our relations in that part of the world.

Bryan also misses the point in thinking that he is the essential target in the attack which Charles Evans Hughes has made upon the episode of the "deserving democrats." Bryan was a subordinate to President Wilson, who had to assent to the sending of any man, "deserving" or undeserving, democrat or republican, Jew, Gentile, Greek or barbarian, to the Santo Dominican customs service.

It is characteristic of Bryan to take up the cudgels. But he need not defend himself in the matter. It is President Wilson who requires defense—and it may be noted that Bryan says nothing about President Wilson in the case. He is apparently going to let President Wilson take care of himself.

COAL MINERS IN WYOMING NOW BEING NATURALIZED

Despite the call of their respective countries, the coal miners and railroad operatives of foreign birth in Wyoming are determined to qualify as United States citizens, according to Paul Armstrong, naturalization examiner of the federal government, with headquarters in Salt Lake City. Armstrong left Salt Lake City last Tuesday night for a trip to Kemmerer and Rock Springs, Wyo. According to the records there are forty alien at Rock Springs and thirty at Kemmerer who have taken out their first papers, and who are now awaiting the final examination for the final papers.

One of the big features of the trip of Armstrong will be the co-operation of the state and local officials in the establishment of night schools in order that applicants for citizenship may receive every opportunity to qualify to take out their final papers.

GOVERNMENT FURTHER NOW CARRYING "DIAMONDS"

WASHINGTON, D. C., Aug. 15.—The government's Alaskan railway is now carrying coal from the Katavak fields to the harbor at Anchorage. Secretary Lane announced today that the first coal train was moved August 14th from Goose Creek over the new line.

"The opening of these fields," he said, "announcing the event, is regarded as a most important and valuable benefit to both Alaska and the Pacific Northwest. It means cheaper fuel for that general country and it is confidently predicted that it will be followed by industrial and mining expansion."

Pope Secures Coal Lands.

There are only about thirty-five hundred acres of patented coal lands in Utah county. Recently John T. Pope, Franklin Pope, Sarah Pope and Minnie Pope each obtained a hundred and sixty acres of land and secured the patent on it. The land they obtained while secured under the coal land designation is said to contain large amounts of lignite and sand asphaltum also. Most of the remaining acres in held by a syndicate of Hester City men.

The man without business resources will not be one to use large spaces in the papers. People know this and feel they can depend on the store that advertises with large spaces.

HOW THE WILSON ADMINISTRATION HAS PENALIZED OUR PATRIOTISM

"Having in view the possibility of further aggression upon the territory of the United States from Mexico and the necessity for the proper protection of that frontier," President Wilson, on June 15, called out the mobile arms of the National Guard for federal service.

He did not call them out at their existing peace strength, but at war strength, which is practically double. Lacking a system of reserves, the National Guard organizations immediately had to start a campaign of recruiting, to bring about the desired increase in their numbers.

Patriotic young citizens, under the age of the cry, "Your country needs you," volunteered for service in gratifying numbers. According to Senator Chamberlain, chairman of the Senate Committee on Military Affairs, the result is that about 135,000 citizen soldiers have been mustered into the federal service and are now on the Mexican border or in camp in their some states. There may be more, but the administration refuses to make known the exact figures.

The movement is costing the public treasury many millions of dollars; it is costing the individual citizen soldiers many millions more. They went to the front believing the cry, "Your country needs you," for war service. They sacrificed advancement in their civil occupations, severed home ties, suffered in thousands of instances, great financial loss. The few patriotic, who did not believe the cry, or believing, declined to make sacrifices, "littered at home on these losses."

The real purposes of the call are slowly developing. They are two in number:

First, a patrol of the border to do the work which President Wilson's friend, Carranza, finds it impossible to do. Because the recognized government in Mexico is too ineffective to keep its own citizens in check and prevent them murdering Americans on American soil, the American government undertakes the costly task of doing that work for them. The murder of American citizens on Mexican soil is another matter. Carranza may go as far as he likes in that direction.

Second, a purpose of the mobilization on the border and in the camps is to train citizens to perform effective military service. The regular military establishment of the nation is manifestly too small for the actual military needs. To this extent the cry, "Your country needs you," was correct.

But these facts were not made clear when the call was issued. The idea was promulgated that men were needed for actual war service; not for military training. Deceit was practiced.

Opposing in the open legislation for universal military service, the administration by its acts has established what in essence is a system of compulsory military service. It is a system all the more vicious because it operates only against the patriotic, whereas a legalized universal training system equalizes the burden of military service among all men and all classes of men.

When, in 1914, Europe plunged into the greatest war of all history, and conditions in Mexico grew intolerable, intelligent men realized the fact that it was incumbent on this nation to build up its regular army and put its other military resources in condition for use. National safety demanded this. And yet, in December of that year, four months after the European war began, President Wilson went before Congress and declared that all agitation for military preparedness was hysterical; that we were adequately prepared.

After a while the administration changed its mind and professed to believe in the necessity for preparedness. First came an enactment to increase the regular army by 50,000. But the body of the country, and even all parts of the Democratic administration, could not change front so quickly as the head. Recruiting for the regular army lagged. Not yet have the 50,000 been secured.

The need pressed. A new national defense act, providing for still more men in the regular army, was enacted. But still the men were not forthcoming.

Suddenly and without warning the administration issued its call for mobilization of the citizen soldiery. It seemed still obsessed with the Bryan notion that an army could be created by presidential edicts.

When the call went out the government did not own enough uniforms, shoes, socks, blankets, hats, wagons, trucks, horses, mules and other things essential to equip the men called; it had made no provision for transporting the troops called to the points where they were required.

Who suffered most by this amazing lack of foresight, this leaping before looking?

Only the 135,000 patriots who believed that their country needed them for national defense; only the men who are making the great sacrifices.

The whole disgraceful story may be summed up in the phrase, the administration has penalized patriotism.

True, it is accumulating, by subterfuge, a reserve of trained soldiers, but events have demonstrated that it cried "wolf" when there was no wolf. Should it be forced to cry "wolf" again, when the wolf is at the door, what will be the result?

hundred sheep in the Palmer Bros. and McMurray bands in Idaho.

The sheep were attacked a few days ago either by a rabid coyote or by a shepherd dog infected with the disease. It is believed that the loss has now reached the maximum.

The damage was done in Cassia county, Idaho, which adjoins Bonanza county, Utah. The heads of the sheep killed have been sent to the Idaho state bacteriologist at Boise, Ida.

IDaho SHEEP STARVING; RANGE FOR STOCK DEAD

HAILEY, Ida., Aug. 22.—Conditions in this section regarding the sheep industry are becoming very bleak. The high prices of sheep and mutton and the natural increase of the bands combined have led the sheepmen to increase their bands far beyond the capacity of the range. In an endeavor to relieve the situation the Idaho State Board of the Sawtooth National Forest has closed up the old trail up Hailey Creek between Hailey, Hailey and the Twin bridges above Ketchikan and has increased to the limit the number of sheep allowed to individual ranchmen on the forest.

But this seems to have been as a drop in the bucket, compared with the demand for increased allotments. Unable to get on the reserve with all their sheep sheepmen have to keep some of their bands on the public range outside and have thus come in antagonism with ranchmen and cattlemen. Hence the many suits between sheepmen and ranchmen and cattlemen.

JUST THE THING FOR DIARRHOEA.

"About two years ago I had a severe attack of diarrhoea which lasted over a week," writes W. C. Jones, Hartford, N. D. "I became so weak that I could not stand upright. A druggist recommended Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy. The first dose relieved me and within two days I was as well as ever. Many druggists recommend this remedy because they know that it is reliable. Obtainable everywhere.—Adv't.

This condition of affairs is bad enough. But what is still worse is that the public range outside of the forest is now practically dead. The half starved sheep have torn up the grass by the roots until even the sagebrush is eaten down close to the ground, which is so hard from trampling that years may elapse before the range can again become fit to sustain many sheep.

Break Price Record.
